In Romania, the most frequently used mean of transportation is the train. There are also buses between cities.

Trains: There are four categories of trains. Slow-trains (“personal”) are the cheapest but the slowest and the least comfortable. They stop at every station, even the smallest, and are used mainly by commuters.

Fast trains (“accelerat” and “rapid”) are more comfortable and stop only at the most important stations.

Inter-City trains are also available between major cities; they are fast, comfortable and expensive.

Buses: There are several companies servicing various routes. Buses are especially popular among students since they are somewhat cheaper and run more frequently than trains.

Planes: If you wish to take the plane, for national or international, regular or charter flights, Cluj-Napoca has an international airport, conveniently located just 10 km east of the city and serviced by the no. 8 bus line.

For booking tickets to any destination from Cluj-Napoca, or for companies not operating on this airport, you can contact one of the numerous travel agencies in town.
