The library was founded in 1872, and it was officially inaugurated together with Babeș-Bolyai University on May 19, 1920. The Royal Family and the Government attended the ceremony. More than 125 institutions and private donors contributed to enlarge the library's collections: The Romanian Academy, the National Archives, the House of Schools, the Romanian Language Museum, etc.

The increasing number of collections and future development plans required more space. The new storage facility opened in 1961, with a storage capacity of over 2 million volumes. The new storage facility is connected to the old one and to the reading rooms.

Along with the advances in information technology and the diversification of users' needs, new dimensions and functions have been implemented. A major step towards these goals was the creation of the IT Laboratory in 1992. Its skilled staff has designed the communication network with the library's branches and ensured the compatibility of the various services within the same framework.

The main library, together with its branches, holds a total of 3 million volumes, of which 500,000 are periodical publications. The library's collections aim to support and improve the academic curricula of Babes-Bolyai University, permanently adapting to the requirements of a modern higher education system; 55 reading rooms with more than 2,100 places provide convenient study facilities.
